Nishiie Hironori	Tomoharu Nagao	A study of method for quantification of corporate organizational culture using internet employee's review and its application	In this study, we used the word-of-mouth text information of domestic listed companies in the categories of "organizational structure/corporate culture," "job satisfaction," and "ease of working" from company word-of-mouth websites as alternative information to express the corporate culture of each company. We then analyzed the relationship between the corporate culture score and the company's performance and stock performance.
